

FY 2016

Community Empowerment Network empowers rural communities in the Brazilian Amazon to become more self-reliant by:

- Helping residents understand that they can solve their own problems
- Strengthening the skills and resources they need to lead their communities and build sustainable livelihoods
- Partnering with a wide range of organizations to remove obstacles, such as lack of energy or limited access to capital and markets, that could otherwise prevent their success

As result, communities and their residents are able to break the cycle of poverty and foster long-term, sustainable development.

Notes to Consolidated Financial Statements (Unaudited)
For the Fiscal Year Ended December 31, 2016

1. Organization

The Community Empowerment Network (“CEN”) is a US-based non-profit which empowers rural communities in developing countries by helping residents build basic life skills, habits and mind-sets to become more self-reliant, and then collaborating closely with residents, their leaders, government and other partners to offer a range of business development services and break down structural barriers so residents can build sustainable livelihoods and improve their quality of life. These efforts break the cycle of poverty, and foster long-term, sustainable development.

CEN is headquartered in Ferndale, Washington. The organization is funded through grants, fund-raising events, and Board donations, as well as by advances in the forms of notes payable to its founder and executive director, Robert Bortner.

CEN’s efforts have been focused primarily on the Brazilian Amazon.

2. Summary of Significant Accounting Policies

a. Basis of Financial Presentation

CEN’s financial statements have been prepared on the accrual basis of accounting. Contributions are recognized as revenues in the period in which they are committed and the board believes that receipt is more likely than not to occur.

b. Cash

Cash consists substantially of U.S.-denominated demand deposits. The organization periodically carries Brazilian Reais for which balances are de minimus.

c. Inventories

Inventory consists of items available for sale on the CENShop online store. Inventory is reported at cost, with no impairments deemed appropriate by the board.

d. Notes Payable

Notes payable relate to expenses and services rendered by CEN’s executive director for which cash payment has not yet been made. Amounts payable are classified in full as non-current due to uncertainty as to the timing of payments.

The note executed with the executive director is non-interest-bearing. Its balance has not been discounted to present value, nor accreted thereafter, due to uncertainty regarding its repayment schedule.

e. Contributed Services

CEN receives donations from many volunteers for services necessary to meet our objectives. The services have been recognized at fair value of in-kind donations and expenses calculated by management based on similar not-for-profit rates of pay for positions of similar responsibilities.

In-kind services from all volunteers and board members totaled 2023 hours valued at $ 52,017 for FY 2016. The value of only in-kind professional services totaled $1,012 for FY 2016.

f. Tax-exempt Status

CEN is exempt from federal income taxes under Internal Revenue Code section 501(c)(3).

g. Presentation of Expenses

Administrative expenses relate to costs incurred in the operation of the organization and in the effort of obtaining grants and other funding.

Program expenses relate to discrete projects. A program is a unique service with specific resources that is executed by a team and for which direct financial support is sought. A program is deemed to commence when a budget, team-based organization, and work breakdown structure have been created and the Board of Directors has approved its execution. Costs are allocated between programs and administration based on management's judgment.

3. Related Parties

CEN's principal liability is to its founder and executive director, Robert Bortner, from whom contributions are also received from time to time. For additional information, see note 2(e) above.
